DETAILED ACTION

Claims 1, 4-11, 27-33 are presented for examination.

In view of the rewritten claims and the applicants' argument, the rejection of claims 1, 4, 10 under 35 USC 102(b) over Lanfear set forth in the Board decision of July 8 2008 is hereby withdrawn.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

- (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1, 4-11, 27-33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the combined teachings of Lanfear et al. (US 2002/0115176), Yuasa et al. (2000) and Vasavada H. (WO 03/077949).

Lanfear teaches a method of identifying agents that affect the activity of PDE11 and/or the expression thereof comprising adding agent in a cell line that expresses PDE11 (see paragraph [0515]), test compound are synthesized on a solid substrate ([0526], lines 6-7), purified PDE11 can also be coated directly onto plates for screening ([0526], lines 11-13).

Lanfear does not teach identifying the test compound as a candidate therapeutic agent useful in the treatment of a cardiovascular disease, and determining whether the test compound has an effect on a symptom of the disease in an in vivo assay, however, Lanfear suggest that inhibitors of PDEs will lead to more effective therapy [0008].

Yuasa suggests that analysis of selective inhibitors for PDEs will elucidate physiological functions (end of page 31478).

Vasavada teaches methods of treating diabetes and cardiovascular disorder (paragraph 14 of the Description), such as hypertension, using PDE11A inhibitors (title).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the method of Lanfear to treat cardiovascular disease by determining whether the test compound has an effect on a symptom of the disease in an in vivo assay because Vasavada teaches treating cardiovascular disorder using PDE11A inhibitor, and Yuasa suggest to study the physiological functions of the PDE inhibitors. One would have been motivated to make the modification because Yuasa suggest to study the physiological functions of the PDE inhibitors, and would reasonably have expected success in view of Vasavada's teaching of treating cardiovascular disease with PDE11A inhibitors, and Lanfear's teaching that inhibitors of PDEs will lead to more effective therapy with fewer side effects [0008]. A person of ordinary skill in the art, upon reading the references, would also have recognized the desirability of determining whether the test compound has an effect on a symptom of the disease in an in vivo assay because a person of ordinary skill in the art would naturally wish to confirm that a test compound/a putative treatment agent, in fact, has the desired treatment activity by assaying the effect on a symptom of the disease in vivo since he/she has good reason to pursue the known options (in vivo or in vitro) within their technical grasp with predictable results.

From the teachings of the references, it is apparent that one of ordinary skill in the art would have had a reasonable expectation of success in producing the claimed invention. Therefore, the invention as a whole was prima facie obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made, as evidenced by the references, especially in the absence of evidence to the contrary.
